Pink Elephant cooking up a storm in Honley

NOW open at Moor Bottom, Honley, the Pink Elephant is the latest Indian restaurant to arrive in the Holme Valley.

Already proving really popular with both locals and good food lovers from further afield, the Pink Elephant has an extensive menu which offers flavours from a number of regions of the Indian sub-continent as well as taking inspiration and influence from Morocco, Persian culture, Spain and the rest of the Mediterranean.

Situated in the right hand side of the Foresters Arms pub, the Pink Elephant opened before Christmas and is already building up a regular and loyal clientele.

The three owners, Jay, Dillon and Imran, along with their highly experienced chef, have devised a menu which showcases tastes from India and far beyond.

Chef's specialities include classic dishes along with contemporary tastes which fuse together the traditional influences with modern cooking. To get your meal under way is a range of both mild and spicy starters which include favourites such as samosas and different platters.

Always popular is the Vegetarian Delight which serves two people as well as the Mixed Platter and Seafood Platter which combine a multitude of different tastes.

Also on the menu is a range of Tandoori grills. The new restaurant, which seats about 50 diners, is accessed from the large car park to the rear of the building.

Jay said: "Indo-Bangla fusion cuisine is a combination of wild and untamed tastes which tantalises the palate with an array of colours, flavours and textures from the Indian sub-continent.

Staff at the Pink Elephant have a vast knowledge of exotic spices and their combinations.

The restaurant takes its name from elephants which are decked in pink as part of the Indian sub-continent's history and heritage.

Coming soon to the Pink Elephant

Starting on Tuesday February 21, the Pink Elephant is starting a Thali night. This will take the same form as a Mediterranean tapas evening when a range of different dishes are available to order.

A range of starters, traditional dishes and vegetarian options will be served all night every Tuesday evening. Booking is advisable at the Pink Elephant, particularly at weekends. Take a look at the website www.pinkelephantrestaurant.co.uk for further details and ring 01484 667000 to book.
